

I live in Piqua, Ohio and my name is Barbara Schwarz. I am sure you would not want a family member of yours or any American to endure what happened to my beloved husband John Schwarz of 34 years.

John was taken by ambulance to Kettering ER on November 29th, 2021. The ER refused to give him Monoclonal Antibodies. I was given Monoclonal Antibodies and I tested negative for covid three days later so I went to the hospital to see John. John was in major depression from the isolation and on high flow oxygen, but was able to stand and move the distance the oxygen tube would allow. I continued to beg the doctors to give him the antibody infusion knowing it could save him and they said it was against the CDC and Hospital protocol. Lily published an article in September 2020 stating, "no patients progressed to mechanical ventilation or died who had been given antibodies."

One of the nurses told me, I don't understand why they won't give it to him since you want it so badly. I asked, "Maybe they don't have enough?" She said, "No, there is plenty just sitting on the shelf, we used to give it to everyone". John's records state it was because of the CDC guidelines he couldn't have it. I gave the doctor a print out of the FLCCC protocol and they refused ivermectrin and only gave him a low dose of Vit C. Then the doctor told me if I could get one administrator to approve the antibodies, he would treat John with it. I tried desperately to contact the administrators and emailed the Hospital CEO with no response. His records state the CEO said it was against hospital policy.

John's journey included being careflighted to The Christ Hospital in Cincinnati. There he was kept from getting a proper bed and ended up with horrific bed wounds. They refused high dose Vit. C again because it wasn't protocol.

The doctor shamed me and said he was a dying man, and stopped treating him. I then applied liquid ivermectrin to his body and three days later he did a complete turnaround. The same doctor stood at his bedside and said what a strong man John was. John made it to Kindred, a step-down hospital in Dayton. Before getting to Kindred a social worker got High dose Vit C approved by the doctor and the pharmacy. But as soon as he got there, they changed their minds.

It took me seven weeks to get a home med approved for high dose liposomal Vit C through the GI tube. Within 24 hours his lungs were clearing and showed improvement in x-rays. His bed wounds were starting to heal and were not going to need debrided.

But John's chest tube that had never been stitched in place had been coming out of his body. The plan to fix it turned into an incident of him lying for 24 hours with a collapsed lung which damaged his heart. Two hospitals and three doctors neglected his chest tube which ended his life.

He endured 2 and 1/2 months of pure torture which could have been prevented if his doctor at Kettering Hospital would have been able to give the antibody infusion. The only reason he didn't was because he feared losing his job. He was not able to treat the way he wanted. It was a battle everyday to try and get the treatment he really needed, and some doctors wanted to give.
