

My mother had some shortness of breath an ambulance was called and she was transferred to the HCA urgent care. They told me she had some pneumonia and transferred her to the main hospital by ambulance. She was stabilized, feeling better and totally coherent. Once in the hospital everything went downhill. They administered Remdesivir until she got so bad they said she had to be intubated. She was in the hospital a total of 6 days. Had she gone home I am certain she would be alive. She was murdered. The fear that was instilled in us with this so called “virus” was a deciding factor into sending her to the hospital. A decision I will forever regret.
