

My husband was admitted 8/3/21. According to hospital records he received 3 doses of Remdesivir the first day. He declined very quickly. We asked about vitamins, Ivermectin and Hydroxychloroquine and was told that it wasn't part of the protocol and was not accessible. We asked for monoclonal antibodies and were told no. Steve was vented on 8/19/21 after we told them NO VENT. He was listed as DNR without my consent. The doctor made the decision for me and I told him absolutely not. He laid in the bed without being turned and developed a horrible bed sore that appeared to be septic. It was the most horrible experience of my life. I watched my love die a little every single day... for 52 days! I tried so hard to save him. I was helpless. There is so much to say about what happened and how I watched my soulmate, best friend, and love of my life fight while he was unvented, cry while talking to me on the phone, and then suffer after he was vented. I was denied access to my husband. I could not visit... only allowed to "see" my husband via a nurse calling me from his phone. I held him as he took his last breath. All i could say to him was how sorry I was.
